Christmas spirit to me is not all presents and toys. To me, it's a dim light in the windowsill of a cold winters night. A family around a small room, and kids playing with big gleaming smiles on their faces. Then your mom comes in with warm steaming glasses of creamy hot chocolate. Everyone settles in a cozy spot with nothing but the cheerful dim glow of that crisp green tree to light the room. When everyone is asleep the night is calm. A crescent moon shines over each little graceful snowflake waltzing through the midnight sky. In the morning, the whole family gets together, for it is Christmas morning in that small house. In conclusion, Christmas spirit to me is not the food or the presents. Though those are fun. Christmas is about being with family and friends.
